Course Description: PD To A Higher Degree

Ever wondered how one man, Walt Disney, created a Magic Kingdom? Join us and register to learn, dream, explore, design, and wonder. Understand how to create a classroom that provides your students with these same feelings. This educational Graduate course is designed to do just that. In this two (2) credit hour course we explore how Walt Disney embodied these traits and how he inspired others around him to help build his Magic Kingdom. We will then take these ideas of creativity, storytelling, leadership, innovation and guest service and apply them to creating classroom magic and even the bigger picture of crafting the schools of tomorrow.

This course includes online, blended learning and an experiential learning experience. The online portion will consist of discussions, lectures, interactive activities, research investigations, media/literacy projects, teamwork and collaboration between classmates and instructors.

The overall goal of this course is to provide participants with instructional methods, concepts, strategies and activities that they will be able to immediately apply to their classroom and schools. Collaboration, curiosity, critical / design thinking, and storytelling are all important 21st century skills that our students need to master but we as educators can continue to improve upon. This course will help participants do both, through the same lens that made Walt Disney and the Disney Company so successful and innovative.
